To be a mirror for your whole body / Victoria Jacobs Your dancing body reflects the architecture of you psyche. Using structured support, writing, witnessing, replay, fluid movement challenged by interruption, and scores with precise boundaries, we will hold up the mirror to your whole body.
MATIC INTENSIVE: ntering®: Embodied Research	Investigating Perception / Douglas MacKenzie Negotiating how we sense and know through The Developmental Movement and Experiential Anatomy of Body-Mind Centering®. Exploring patterns of our earliest movement, we re-negotiate habits and arrive, now, into skillful embodied dancing.
ss.I / Morgan Thorson practices in Skinner Releasing urselves past what we know about ceptions of our bodies & space, our nization.	Instant Readiness.2 / Morgan Thorson Building upon IR.1, we will practice witnessing as a form of instant feedback. At the intersection of wildness and awareness, moving our connections with the witness, dancing and composing with the kinesthetic power generated from both our state and those connections.
ENSIVE: roject	Drop in with luciana achugar The Pleasure Project is a public space intervention in which we will pose questions about what it means to be a civilized, socialized, organized body and our assumed role as bodies in a public space; dissolving social norms in a non-performative space.

DARRELL JONES has performed in the US and abroad with Ralph Lemon, Bebe Miller, Urban Bush Women, Ronald K. Brown, and Min Tanaka. His Bessie Award-winning work has been presented by The Place London, Kwanju Biennale South Korea, Kennedy Center; and in New York by Danspace, and Judson Church. Darrell's research is informed by studies in improvisation, Butoh, a variety of dance techniques; and alliances with artists whose work gathers inspiration from the ecologies with which they come into contact. He is full-time faculty at Columbia College Chicago.

The Pleasure Project: Movement Practice as Intervention of Public Space LUCIANA ACHUGAR is a two-time Bessie Award recipient choreographer from Uruguay, based in Brooklyn, whose work is concerned with the post-colonial world, searching for an undoing of power structures from the inside out. She worked as a dancer with several influential choreographers including Jeremy Nelson, Maria Hassabi, Chameckilerner and John Jasperse. She began making her own work in 2002; has been presented by The Walker, American Realness, NYLA (to name a few), is a Guggenheim Fellow, and was chosen as 2010 TimeOUT NY's Best of Dance.

Body-Mind Centering®: Embodied Research

CATHIE CARAKER is a dance artist and teacher, practicing CI since the early 80s. She studied extensively with Nancy Stark Smith, Steve Paxton, and Karen Nelson. A certified practitioner of Body-Mind Centering ® (BMC), she applies the BMC work to improvisation, movement research and dance-making. Her work and teaching have been presented by major festivals and venues across the US, Europe and South America. A life-long learner, she loves to share her passion for movement research and deep play through her teaching.

Broad Strokes, Deep Dance: Foundations of Contact Improvisation

KRISTA DENIO is an interdisciplinary artist, writer and educator committed to developing new forms of performance and evolving interdisciplinary thinking within the fields of dance and theater. A practitioner of Contact Improvisation for eighteen years, she approaches the form from a variety of perspectives: from CI's technical foundation and support of partnering work in performance, to the radical personal and political potentialities existing within the practice and participating communities.
